The 2013 annual conference of the UK Branch of the IVR is designed to bring together legal theorists and legal historians (including historians of legal theory and political thought) in an attempt to facilitate and encourage dialogue between the two disciplines.

The aim of this conference is to explore both how legal theory may be enriched, informed, or challenged, by engaging with historical research, and how legal theory can in turn contribute invaluable conceptual resources for legal historians to draw on. Over sixty legal theorists and historians will present papers on a variety of topics, which range from general explorations of the methodologies of legal theory and legal history to detailed studies of particular theorists or histories.

Plenary speakers and commentators include:

- » Quentin Skinner (QMUL)
- » John Bell (Cambridge)
- » Joshua Getzler (Oxford)
- » Eric Descheemaeker (Edinburgh)
- » William Lucy (Durham)
- » Ian Williams (UCL)
- » Thomas Poole (LSE)
- » David Ibbetson (Cambridge)
- » Philip Schofield (UCL)
